

Correction to Real-Time Assessment of Black Carbon Pollution in Indian Households Due to Traditional and Improved Biomass Cookstoves

Abhishek Kar,[†] Ibrahim H. Rehman,[†] Jennifer Burney,^{*,‡} S. Praveen Puppala,[‡] Ramasubramanyaiyer Suresh,[†] Lokendra Singh,[†] Vivek K. Singh,[†] Tanveer Ahmed,[‡] Nithya Ramanathan,[§] and Veerabhadran Ramanathan[‡]

[†]The Energy and Resources Institute, New Delhi, India

[‡]Scripps Institution of Oceanography, University of California, San Diego, California, 92121, United States

[§]Center for Embedded Sensor Networking, University of California, Los Angeles, California, 90095, United States

Environ. Sci. Technol. 2012, 46, 2993–3000; DOI: 10.1021/es203388g

Revision for Table 1:

The three columns in Table 1 titled “% change from mud stove” should instead read “Fractional change from mud stove.” To get the percent change, the numbers in these columns should be multiplied by 100. For example, the Forced Draft stove FD2 reduces BC concentration in the breathing zone by 0.56 (fractional change), or 56% (percent change).

■ AUTHOR INFORMATION

Corresponding Author

*E-mail: jburney@ucsd.edu.